

The FSI is building an eBay auction this Small Charity Week to sell a range of outstanding products to raise funds for small charities. We'll help with the marketing, provide you with tools to help raise profiles of your items and host your items on the eBay site. All you need to do is source the items!

Items of a unique or high value do particularly well on eBay auctions; these don't just have to be material items, they can be a once in a life time experience too! Anything of celebrity or star association will do extremely well, but we will consider any items or ideas you have.

Examples of previous high profile auctions:

- Internships with high profile entrepreneurs like Julian McDonald
- Limited edition items e.g. clothing, books, photos etc
- Signed items e.g. football shirts, books, photos etc
- The opportunity to meet celebrities, leading journalists, inspirational figures
- Music memorabilia (or memorabilia of any kind)
- Exclusive fishing/countryside experiences

A range of various items similar to those listed above will be accepted and entered into the auction. If you are unsure about any potential item you have, simply contact events@thefsi.org to discuss.

Due to the nature of this auction the FSI cannot accept general items, these include anything that can be sold on a regular basis or that is easy to acquire by the public such as:

- Goods available for commercial sale
- Goods with unknown provenance

100% of the funds raised by your auction item will be given to your charity.

Get involved, we look forward to hearing from you!
